IPR (Intellectual Property Rights)- India :

Being one of the major developing economies in the world, India is now treated to be one of the compulsory countries for protection of intellectual property by major companies world-wide. As a result, the patent filings in India received from abroad are increasing drastically day-by-day. This is due to simplified protection system & secure enforcement management. India has already established Intellectual Property Appellate Board and has enacted laws relating to the registration of IPR with Indian customs authorities such that any infringed goods are stopped from entering into the country at the ports.
